

Getting It Wrong: Regional Cooperation and the Commonwealth of Independent States

Contents

Preface

1. The Failure of the CIS

The Birth of the CIS

The Rocky Start of the CIS

No Trust of Russia

The Goals of the CIS

New Understandings of Sovereignty

The Late CIS: Holding on to Sovereignty

A New Kind of Union

2. CIS Economic Integration

The Formation of the CIS Economic System

The End of State Trade

The Establishment of New Currencies and a New Payments System

The Nature of Energy Trade within the CIS

Rising Protectionism Instead of Economic Integration

Development of Intra-CIS Trade, 1992-1997

Impact of the Russian Financial Crisis in 1998

Prospects for Economic Integration

Alternatives to Failure

3. The Failure to Establish an Integrated Security Structure

Russian Interests and Intentions for CIS Security Integration

National Armies Not Integration

Border Guards, Air Defense, and Peace Keeping

Why CIS Security Mechanisms Have Failed

Trying to Compensate Bilaterally for CIS Failure

4. The CIS and National Strategies for State-Building

Kazakhstan: Integration and State-Building

Kyrgyzstan: Attempting to Keep the Way to the World Open

Ukraine: Nation-Building but Little Economic Reform

Georgia: Between Russia and the World

Common Features

5. Regional Alternatives to the CIS

The Central Asian Economic Community

The GUUAM Group

The Customs Union

Russian-Belarusan Integration

Regional Efforts in Perspective

6. The CIS And the Outside World

Political Challenges

Economic Challenges

Security Challenges

Conclusion

7. What Future Does the CIS Have?

The Legacy of the Past

Tasks the CIS Has Resolved

Tasks at Which the CIS Has Failed

Remaining Challenges

Looking Ahead

Chronology